About the FDP : Hybrid Classroom.

In recent years there has been a groundswell of interest in how computers and the Internet can best be harnessed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of education at all levels in both formal and non-formal settings. As technology becomes more and more embedded in our culture, there is a need to provide learners with relevant and contemporary experiences that allow them to successfully engage with technology and prepare them for life after acquiring their school education/ degree.

Hybrid Teaching and Learning refers to learning models that combine traditional classroom practice with e-learning solutions. For example, students in a traditional class can be assigned both print-based and online materials. They have online mentoring sessions with their teacher through various ICT tools available at ease. "Hybrid Classroom" was prompted by the recognition that not all learning is best achieved in an electronically-mediated environment, particularly one that dispenses with a live instructor altogether. Instead, consideration must be given to the subject matter, the learning objectives and outcomes, the characteristics of the learners, and the learning context in order to arrive at the optimum mix of instructional and delivery methods.

Objectives :

- To encourage teachers to think about an increased use of ICT tools in teaching, and to inspire them on where and how to use these tools is the main idea of this ICT Workshop.
- To build an Ideal Classroom for the 21st Century and develop curriculum materials for different ages to foster deep understanding
