In addition to participating in academic pursuits, students receive professional development. Intermittent extracurricular activities have been planned. The department maintains its own literary, debate, and drama clubs for students.

MAHARAJA COLLEGE, ARA The first and oldest coeducational institution in south-west Bihar, Maharaja Bahadur Ram Ran Vijay Prasad Singh College (M.B.R.R.V.Pd.SINGH COLLEGE), also known as Maharaja College, Ara, was founded on September 13, 1954, to address the increasing demand for education, particularly higher education facilities in the Shahabad district after independence. On February 1, 1976, the college became a part of Magadh University in Bodh Gaya, Bihar. Following Magadh University's October 1992 split, Veer Kunwar Singh University was established, with its main office located in Ara. The UGC regulation's 2(f) and 12(b) both acknowledge the college or university. The Maharaja College is obviously more older than Veer Kunwar Singh University Ara today. The university is located in the center of town. -- <https://maharajacollege.ac.in/>
